

The truth about micro-fiber and cleaning

Micro-fiber clothes are a man-made product that is best used in cleaning applications by combining two basic fibers, Polyester and Polyamide (a nylon by-product.) These fibers are then “split” and formed into a blend of 80% Polyester (the scrubbing and cleaning fiber), and 20% Polyamide (the absorbing and quick drying fiber.) There are approximately 200,000 micro-fibers in one square inch of a micro-fiber towel!

Unlike ordinary cleaning towels that only move or push the dirt and dust from one point to another, micro-fiber actually “scrapes” the dirt or stain from the surface, and then stores the dirt particles in the towel, until it is washed. Micro-fiber clothes have a reduced environmental impact by saving cleaning time, little to no chemical usage, reduced electrical/gas energy usage, fewer allergic reactions & saves money because they can be reused a minimum of 500 times.
